

Salvo Nicotra

He received the degree in Computer Science (summa cum laude) in 1999, discussing a thesis supervised by professor Jacob T. Schwartz from the New York University.

In 2003 he obtained the PhD in Computer Science on Visual Data Mining and Scientific Visualization and published several papers in international conferences and journals.

In 2004 joined Neodata, when was a startup, covering in the years different roles like software development, platform design, business continuity and disaster recovery procedures and project managing.

In 2015 assumed the role as Neodata Chief Technology Officer, focusing mainly on research and technology innovation and complex project management.

Very passionate in big data and web technologies, is following with great enthusiasm the rise of this data age.